As Bill Kellett, the General Manager, succinctly puts it, "Our commitment to our customers and the industries we serve is paramount."

The Need

In a rapidly evolving business landscape, LPF sought to preserve their outstanding customer service by adopting a system tailored to their distinct processes. With tens of thousands of SKUs, primarily ordered on-demand, a robust inventory management and order handling system became indispensable. Their operations, ranging from foreign currency transactions, shipments from various locations to the crucial dropshipping aspect, demanded seamless integration with a comprehensive financial system.

Why Aquilon ERP?

Previously acquainted with Aquilon in another venture, LPF found it natural to seek their expertise. Aquilon showcased how their software could elevate LPF's inventory management using real-time processes. The promise of enhancing customer service, fine-tuning inventory, and addressing dropshipping concerns coupled with swift implementation made Aquilon the top choice.

Outcomes

Post-Aquilon integration, LPF witnessed a significant uptick in their order management efficiency, eliminating the need for redundant transactions across different systems. Although they didn't maintain formal metrics, the estimated productivity boost is around 25%. This enhancement came with inventory optimization, a reduction in working capital, and a surge in sales—all without needing new hardware. An upgrade to SSD drives on their server further amplified performance due to their data-intensive operations.

Final Thoughts

Transitioning to a new system often has its learning curve, but with Aquilon's guidance and support, LPF achieved a smooth transition. Bill reflects, "As we delve deeper into the software, we continuously refine our processes. There's an extensive depth to this software that we're still uncovering." The defining testament? A healthier bottom line post-Aquilon's incorporation.
